

Rex Boyd - Publicity Info

Rex Boyd appears at first to be a normal guy talking about normal life in England. Normality soon gives way to the enthusiastic fervour of a street preacher and the manic physicality of a cross between Lee Evans and Jim Carrey culminating in an exciting, party-like atmosphere of improvisation, interaction and quite often thrillingly unpredictable responses.

Rex started doing comedy in his hometown of Kansas City in 1986. A couple of years later he was working the London alternative comedy scene as well as street performing regularly at Covent Garden. This was followed by four years globe trotting the festival circuit before finally settling down back in England where he has been an unusual highlight of the comedy club circuit ever since.

Quotes:

"With style and energy, Rex Boyd can bombard any room into a hilarious state of frenzy, making him a brilliant crowd pleaser and a slicker-than-slick stand up," Jon Reed, The Other Side Comedy Clubs.

"It's a refreshing change to see an act that dares to be so different from peoples expectations, truly breaking the proverbial mould and doing it with such style and confidence that only the most humourless among us could possibly be left unimpressed." Simon Kimber, Funny.co.uk.

"This is the second time he has been here in six months and still utterly brilliant. I think you could watch this act over and over again and still find it funny. He is definitely in the top 5 funniest acts who have ever appeared at this club - I had members of the audience saying this to me afterwards as well." Martin Mullaney, Cheeky Monkey Comedy Club.
